

I think NJ's DO Not Call List law should remain as it is. If I do business with a company, I am looking to buy a product or service, not a lifelong commitment to annoying, unwanted, ill-timed phone calls. Letting an answering machine pick up the calls is no solution because telemarketers always hang up without leaving a message. The phone ringing every 15 minutes for an hour with a hang up each time is probably even more annoying than the sales call itself.

Most internet shopping sites now give the choice to opt out of any advertizing or future contact. We should have the same choice with all companies with which we conduct business. Right now, the Do Not Call List is THAT option!
